Researchers Get First Significant Hit On The Australian Shepherd

Dr. Ned Patterson announced “some good initial news.... we did get a statistically significant hit on one chromosome. This is the only breed that we have yet gotten a significant hit for! This is fairly likely to be real but we will need additional dogs and analysis to confirm.”

Please help us to continue to support the research by making a donation or running a fundraiser for us, and please donate a blood sample from your affected dog and on dogs 10+ years old that have never had a seizure.

Our efforts are paying off! Thank you for your continued support.
